- a. Provide an introduction that is relevant to the rest of the text and effectively engages the audience.
- b. Organize ideas to create cohesion and clarify relationships among ideas and concepts, including but not limited to use of appropriate and varied transitions.
- c. Develop the topic with well-chosen, relevant, and sufficient facts, extended definitions, concrete details, quotations, or other information and examples appropriate to the audience's knowledge of the topic.
- d. Provide a concluding statement or section that follows from and supports the information or explanation presented.
- e. Use appropriate formatting, graphics, and multimedia to aid comprehension.
- f. Use precise language and domain-specific vocabulary to manage the complexity of the topic.
- g. Establish and maintain a formal style and objective tone.

After reading the longer selection for Q2, students will prepare a multi-media research project in which they investigate and inform the class about a topic related to an element of the novel or drama. For example, if the novel is A Tale of Two Cities, students might research some aspect of the French Revolution or French Culture, or how the French participation in the American Revolution affected the eventual French Revolution. Or they might research the life and work of Charles Dickens, the role of women in Dickens' novels, or the feudal system in France. They might research the pre-revolution economic system in France and how the revolution changed it or theories on how the British avoided a revolution all together. Students should have freedom to choose a topic they are interested in for their research. Parameters of the project will be set forth by the teacher.

There is no longer a weekly pacing guide. This enables teachers to teach at their own pace. However, teachers must cover all of the quarter 1 standards during the first 9 weeks. It is recommended that while teaching the suggested literary pieces, teachers incorporate vocabulary from the literature and give writing, speaking/listening, and research assignments over the literature as well.
